NOW, WHILE WE ARE WORKING WITH EXCELLENT EQUIPMENT IN NEW, MODERN BUILDINGS, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT OUR PROGRESS AND CHECK THE BLUEPRINT FOR THE FUTURE.

Here we see Col. Hough instructing Johnny Miller in the finer points of engineering drawing.

FOREWORD

The college year 1962-1963 has been one of the most interesting years of its existence. Our classes with their serious discussions, our sports, dances, and parties with gayer moments will long be recalled. From our campus life we shall remember, especially, the pounding of hammers, the hauling of dirt, and the sound of electric drills.

In this yearbook we have attempted to give an idea of our college life this past year at Asheville-Biltmore. The events that have happened assume great importance to us because we have shared them with our friends and classmates.

While an air of expansion of the curricula exists within our college, a similar air of the buildings outside prevails everywhere at Asheville-Biltmore this year. On the division pages we have reproduced the sketches of our new buildings now under construction, thus giving you an insight into our

All Students of Asheville-Biltmore College

Our college is now in a period of great expectations. At the time this letter is written we are waiting for the 1963 General Assembly to meet and decide on the future of our college, as well as others in North Carolina. By the time you receive your copies of the Summit we should have definite information as to the role Asheville-Biltmore College will play in the future of higher education in this state. We expect to receive great challenges. We know we can respond to them.

While we are contemplating the long desired conversion of Asheville-Biltmore to a senior college we should be giving thought to what a college education should mean, either here or anywhere else. We should think of it as more than a means for preparing for a profession and earning a better livelihood, although that is one of the results we all expect. We must think of higher learning as being primarily for the purpose of increasing one's knowledge of the world he lives in and his capacity to live in it purposefully and effectively. Higher learning should make it possible for all of us to add new dimensions to the total life experience. Unless we develop in our college years a desire for more highly refined goals and a sense of direction and purpose then the mere development of marketable skills becomes ultimately meaningless.

The next few years will be filled with excitement as we move into new areas of activity. Let us all - students, faculty, administrators, trustees, and alumni - resolve to use these formative years well. We will never have an opportunity to do it again.

Here we find eager students doing reference work.

The library is the center of academic activities at Asheville-Biltmore College. The rapid growth of the college is reflected by expansion of our library. Two additions to the library staff have been made this year. The number of periodicals and professional journals to which the library subscribes has been increased from fifty to over two hundred, and there is an adequate book collection for a liberal arts institution. The new library building should be completed by September of 1964. The building, when adequately equipped, will take care of the needs of the community for years to come.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

Asheville-Biltmore College, in conjunction with Memorial Mission Hospital, has had for several years a course of study to train, in part, the first year student nurses. During the academic year 1962-1963, 36 student nurses have come to the A-B campus to take the following courses: Anatomy and Physiology, Chemistry, Microbiology, Psychology, and Sociology. These courses provide for a person entering the nursing profession an educational basis for the intensive clinical practice taken at Memorial Mission Hospital.

ASHEVILLE-BILTMORE

Across the wooded western slopes of the campus a dream is becoming a reality. This dream is a vision of a lovely park, landscaped with trails and bridges, containing labeled specimens of each flower, plant, tree and shrub native to the mountains of Western North Carolina. This dream is one of an outdoor biological laboratory for the Department of Botany, a center for plant and forest research. The dream envisions a place of quiet beauty beside a rock-strewn strain, a haven for wildflowers, ferns and mosses growing as in their native woods.

The dream is the project of those who are building the Asheville-Biltmore college Botanical Gardens: doctors and engineers, businessmen and housewives, people of Asheville who believe in the future of our College and who love the floral wealth with which the Creator has so magnificently endowed this land. During the past year the site was partially cleared of undesirable undergrowth and the trails bulldozed through the forest. Many years of construction and planting lie ahead, but this goal, like the Campus, will surely materialize, for the enjoyment and education of all the people.

MAY COURT 1962

Among the activities of May Day, was a play: "Le Malade Imaginaire" by Moliere.

ATHLETICS

Construction on the Physical Ed. Building now in process. The completion date will be Sept. 1963.

The 1962-63 basketball season of Asheville-Biltmore College got off to a slow start. We lost the first two games, but upset North Greenville Junior College. The Bulldogs beat Warren Wilson, Gardner Webb, and Wingate. In the next game, the Bulldogs rallied to score 111 points and to beat Charlotte College. In our longest winning streak, five games, we defeated Warren Wilson, Kings College, Anderson, Furman, and North Greenville. The Bulldogs got revenge in defeating the Western Carolina Catamounts the second time we played them. In the game against Spartanburg, one of our best games, the Bulldogs, scored 110 points. Asheville's Jim Baker hit 47 points, one of the school's highest individual scores. A-B then traveled to Wingate and lost. The following night, we beat Kings by 2 points with Mike Rutledge hitting 2 free throws in the remaining 10 seconds. Our season ended with the Bulldogs winning 13 games and losing 11.
